1. INFORMATION ABOUT THE EVENT

Dates: 16 April – 19 April, 2026

Location: Marseille, France

Host: Friche la Belle de Mai

2. MEET THE HOST

Before La Friche became La Friche, it was one of France's largest tobacco and cigars factories, the SEITA. It employed nearly 1,000 women and men until it shut down in 1990.

Starting in 1992, a cultural project began to develop in the newly emptied buildings, at the behest of the city of Marseille alongside elected official for culture Christian Poitevin (also known by his artist pseudonym, Julien Blaine), and the director of System Friche Theater, Philippe Foulquié. In the months that followed, a number of producers, cultural operators and artistic teams joined the Friche project.

In 1995, with architect Jean Nouvel as President of the association, La Friche launched a study that would establish the ambitions and founding principles of La Friche la Belle de Mai, forging a close connection between the urban and cultural dimensions of the project.

La Friche is both a workspace for 70 resident organisations (400 artists, producers, and employees work here every day), and a cross-disciplinary venue (each year, over 600 artistic events are made available to the public). Every year, 450,000 visitors come to this 45,000 square-meter public space housing five performance spaces, a community garden, a playground and athletic space, a restaurant, bookstore, daycare, some 2,400 square meters of exhibition space, an 8,000 square-meter rooftop, 3 theater venues, 2 concert venues, and a training center.

It's not a coincidence that La Friche adopted the name of La Belle de Mai, the larger neighborhood surrounding it. Neighborhood youth feel welcome in the spaces that are open seven days a week, and the youngest Belle de Mai residents even have a daycare. La Friche opened the cinema Le Gyptis in 2014, which has since become a pillar of the neighborhood, and people from Belle de Mai and beyond feel at home in its many open spaces.

2. MEET THE HOST

ACCESSIBILITY

Because of La Friche architecture - two ground floors, three levels, multiple staircases, and its overall size - understanding the layout can be challenging for new visitors.

The “Red Path”, painted on the ground, is the main circulation route through La Friche. It connects nearly all of the open spaces.

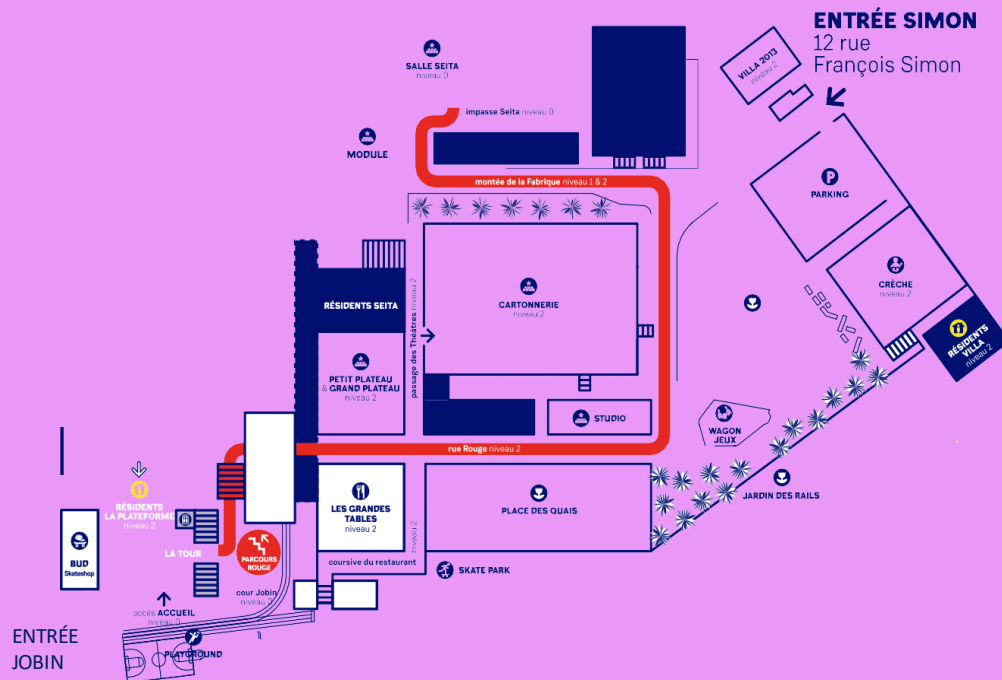

There is an elevator that covers every floor of the Friche, so every room and venues are accessible.

Children: Kids are welcome but must remain under parental supervision at all times.

Please note that no childcare services are provided.

Baby changing table is available in one of restrooms. Every room and venues are accessible. There is an elevator that covers every floor of the Friche.

Toilets will be gender-neutral in the main venue of the meeting.

If you require any additional assistance, please contact Ana at astervinou@lafriche.org in advance so we can support you during your visit.

8. COMMUNITY HOSTING IN LA FRICHE

We have a couple rooms available in the Villa 2013, a house located in la Friche, for people who struggle with the prices of the accommodation in Marseille. It is usually the place where we welcome artists on short residencies or during festivals that take place in our venues.

It's a small house with 9 individual rooms (single or double beds available), divided in two floors with a shared bathroom and a shared toilet on each floor. Common areas are the kitchen located on the basement floor and a living room on the ground floor.

Bear in mind this place is quite old, very basic and is more similar to a hostel than a B&B/hotel/rental.

If you want more information on this accommodation, contact Ana at astervinou@lafriche.org.

Single or double room	30€ / night (taxes included)	24€ / night (taxes included)

9. GET TO KNOW THE CITY

Marseille, located on France's Mediterranean coast, is the country's oldest city. It was founded around 600 BCE by Greek sailors from Phocaea, who named it Massalia. Thanks to its natural harbor, the city quickly became an important trading post connecting the Greek world with the Celtic tribes of inland Gaul.

Today, Marseille is France's second-largest city, and second most populous city in France, known for its port, its vibrant neighborhoods, and its unique Mediterranean identity blending European and North African influences.
